

Marcia MacRae will be sharing examples of children working with and studying recycled materials. These examples will include work done with infants, toddlers, twos, 3-5 year olds and school age children. Explore an endless supply of materials that offer diverse colors, textures, shapes, and possibilities, while discovering new uses for old objects that will all fit into your budget!

Marcia MacRae has an extensive background in developing museum exhibits and programs for children, families, and adults. Realizing the power of self-motivated exploration and arts processes on learning, she earned her MA from the Columbia College Interdisciplinary Arts program. Happily, Marcia is a studio coordinator with Chicago Commons.
